

Soldiers Urgently Committed to the Supply of Medicines

In mid-May a strong contingent of medical personnel in the military medical sector of the Korean People's Army has been urgently committed to the battle for the supply of medicines and medical treatment, aimed at tiding over the epidemic crisis in Pyongyang, the capital city of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. With a determination to defend the security of the capital city, they are conducting a 24-hour service to provide the medicines from the state to the capital's citizens.
